EDMONTON 7, ALBERTA

Increased student representation

A special meeting of the General Faculties Council will be held on Wednesday, February 3, 1971, at 2 p.m. The agenda will consist of a single item, the question of increased student representation on the Council. To permit interested staff members and students to view the discussion, the meeting will be carried by closed circuit television to the Students' Union theatre.

The "Report of the Ad Hoc Committee on Student Representation on General Faculties Council" and the related minority report were published in FOLIO on December 3, 1970.

Several individuals and groups have submitted briefs to the General Faculties Council commenting on this matter. Four bodies to which the matter of student representation is of particular interest are the Students' Union, the Graduate Students' Association, the Association of the Academic Staff, and the Non-Academic Staff Association. These four were invited to prepare summary statements for FOLIO; all but the Non-Academic Staff Association did so.

Association of the Academic Staff of The University of Alberta

This statement is part of a longer policy statement which was adopted by the AASUA council in considering the reports on student representation on General Faculties Council. The third paragraph was adopted as the official Association statement at the general meeting on January 13.

The report of the General Faculties Council Committee on Student Representation raises a number of important issues in addition to the basic question of whether students should be seated on the chief academic decision-making authority within the University government. Of interest to us, as an organized group representing a single constituency within the university community, is the recognition of the difference between an organization and the constituency it represents. This is a principle on which the AASUA has operated, and on which we defend all of our activities. The Association is content, therefore, with a single spokesman on the Council but has expected, as a matter of course, representation as an equal partner in discussions pertaining to those areas directly under our purview. Under any reconstituted GFC we would expect the same procedures to be followed. By extension, the same argument should, in our opinion, apply to other constituency organizations. In each case we would expect that the role of the constituency be clearly defined: what areas are in the interest of the Association; what part should it play in decision-making in these areas; what areas of decision-making are, or should be, outside the aegis of GFC entirely?

The report of the committee presupposes that its recommendations can go into effect without a consideration of changes in The Universities Act. It further presupposes that the role of GFC need not be changed because of their report. There is some question in our mind on these points. Section 33(3) of The Universities Act establishes the number of elected members of GFC. The number provided for in the committee's recommendation far exceeds this number. Section 33(4) provides for appointed members but it clearly specifies that these members shall be from the staff of the University. To have students represented on GFC, would require an amendment of the Act. We would raise one other point in this regard. The granting of parity of representation to students and academic staff implies equality of voting strength as a matter of right on academic questions within the University community. We recognize that the consideration of changes in the Act was considered outside its frame of reference by the committee; but we suggest that the image of the University as envisaged by the committee is different from that of those who drew up the Act in its present form. We suggest, therefore, that the entire matter of the powers of the various governing bodies needs reconsideration in the light of changed concepts of what constitutes the University.

The Association is concerned, as is the minority report, that the majority recommendation blurs a number of important distinctions. We support the argument that further consideration must be given to certain distinctions such as those between academic and non-academic matters and between consultation and communication on one hand, and decision-making and final authority on the other. We are also concerned that the majority report appears to accept by implication that current student representation has been ineffective and finally, that the majority report may fail to provide for the most effective means of enabling student opinion to influence University policy.

Notwithstanding the possible need for increased student representation on GFC, we believe that the majority report has not fully answered the objections of the minority report and we cannot endorse the principles of further student representation on GFC until the full implications of the majority report have been researched and examined.

The Association notes that the minority report directs two matters to our consideration. These two matters, namely, that the teaching staff could be compelled to adopt standards and practices that they considered unwise, and that the enlarged GFC would be unwieldy with the consequences of making the administration more powerful, independent and irresponsible, are of direct concern to us. On the latter point the Association has been advocating the adoption, in areas of its concern, of clearly defined, well publicized principles to be derived from direct consultation with members of the University community involved. We have been charged with fostering the "legalization" of the University, and of advocating rigid, time-consuming procedures in place of traditional and informal procedures. We have contended that this was the price of a large University. Informal unwritten procedures cannot function adequately in a community as large as ours. We recognize that continued increase in the size of the University, and an increase in the size of GFC, will increase the pressures to maintain vigilance. We expect that GFC will consider this matter and note in this context that the majority report as well expresses this concern. The other matter raised is one which admits to no easy response. It may well be that, in a university governmental system in which the teaching staff were forced to submit to standards and policies which they, in large measure, opposed, direct action would have to be taken by the Association. These standards might well be considered items of academic welfare and we note that an increasing number of academic staffs are negotiating for such matters as class size and class loads in collective agreements with their employers. It is not a prospect we desire, but it is a matter which we must keep in mind.

This document is not directed expressly to all the issues which concerned the committee. It is, however, our response to the issues which we see arising from the discussion. As an organization speaking on behalf of all members of the academic staff we cannot speak definitively on the issues. We do, however, want to raise these points for the consideration of all members of the University community.

So the groups could be classed as equal to the extent that each is subject to the same legislature. However here the analogy ends, for although the student may have the ability to influence some decisions he singly lacks the power to effect them; this in spite of the fact that he is the major justification for that institution and predominates in terms of numbers. One could postulate that the end result of this inequity would be violent confrontation, simply using the examples is ample evidence on other campuses; as to whether that might happen here, of course, could only be speculation. However it is reasonable to assume that student antagonism to University policies is not always a simple result of the implications of those policies but is accentuated by the lack of meaningful participation in the creation of them.

If one wishes to follow the 'claptrap' ideals of a democratic institution then one is duty bound to give representation in the decision-making processes of that institution considering both the proportionate size of any identifiable group and the degree to which it will be affected by decisions made by the governing body. It was for this reason, in fact, that the Students' Union withdrew from GFC since its very presence was a contradiction to the ideals that put it there. Giving the students token votes may be termed a form of conciliation but in reality does little more than cloud the real issue that should be considered.

For this reason we hope that individuals will come out in favor of the proposed increased representation considering primarily the concept of a democratized university rather than hiding behind a facade of 'concerns' which serve only to mask the hypocrisy of their stand.

Students' Union

This brief arose from the final report of the Ad Hoc Committee on Student Participation on General Faculties Council and its committees, and is intended both to clarify the position of the Students' Union with respect to that report and to further develop the basis on which the ideal of student representation is advanced.

The Students' Union, after consideration, concurs with the proposed composition of the General Faculties Council with the proviso that Students' Council determine the method of filling students' seats on General Faculties Council without the right to recall.

It has been our concern that neither the majority nor the minority report addressed itself directly to the philosophy of increased representation. The approach was rather, strictly pragmatic, justifying representation on the one hand with a mathematical proof and decrying it on the other because of the odious nature of being classed as equal to students.

We contend that it would be impossible to justify the proposed student representation on purely pragmatic grounds. We defy anyone to prove beyond a shadow of doubt (which appears to be required) that extending the franchise to women in the early part of this century was completely justified; similarly, without any sort of moral basis one couldn't establish that the negro in the United States should be treated as an equal to the whites. One cannot establish the validity of either unless you believe in the concepts of democracy and equality.

It is interesting to note that virtually any argument that could be used against student representation has a direct correlation to the two analogies cited.

Consider the position of the woman in society half a century ago; as a rule her education, and social and political involvement were inferior to that of a man's. The fact that she was not as able to articulate her point of view was used to justify her inability to effect it.

It has been submitted that the entitlement of the woman to representation of her views does not, automatically, lead to the conclusion that she should have full voting powers, even conceding the many failings of a man in judgment, and is no reason to disregard what has been termed a man's superior knowledge, experience, and concern that qualify him for a place in the government.

So why then was the franchise extended? Only because our society purported to be democratic, i.e. run by those whom it governs.

So, in approaching the concept of representation in the university one must first define the nature of that institution.

This University is a community composed of three identifiable major groups, the administration, the faculty, and the students. It should also be a fair statement that any decisions made by the General Faculties Council will potentially affect any one of these groups to the same degree as it could affect any other.

Graduate Students' Association

The Graduate Students' Association agrees in principle with the recommendations of the Majority Report of the Ad Hoc Committee on Student Representation. However, we feel convinced that a more equitable distribution of representatives among the various faculties and schools could have been suggested. (The majority report gave one representative each to Science, Dentistry, Pharmacy and Arts. It appears to us that a grouping of the medical and paramedical faculties is not an unjust proposition, and the representatives thus made available should be distributed between Arts and Science.)

The dissenting report, a document we have studied with great interest, raises some points with which we firmly disagree. The university structure should attempt to accommodate the legitimate aspirations of faculty and students in the formation of its academic policies and programs and to give each an adequate share of the responsibility. It is our claim that in any university students should be provided with authentic opportunities to plan and manage aspects of their own learning, and the environment in which this learning takes place, not as passive agents but as active critics.

The dissenting report claims that there is no self-evident reason to assume a valid analogy between a university and a fully democratic political society. Equally, there is no self-evident reason for denying that the analogy exists unless one holds to an outmoded conception of a university. To deny the democratic principle with respect to student representation while holding it tenaciously with respect to the present faculty-dominated General Faculties Council defies reason. If the university is conceived of as a 'guild' in which the master stipulates the rules and goals while the apprentices follow placidly, it is possible to arrive at the conclusions of the dissenting report. But we question this 'guild' concept, and doubt that progressive thinkers could agree with such a conception. Just as we do not believe that the student should be the absolute authority on the ends, means, and effectiveness of his learning, or should assume total control over the decisions made in the course of his goal, so we reject the opposite idea of the faculty as masters. On this view the need to justify the right of students to participate in the decision-making processes at all levels does not arise, nor does the distinction made in the dissenting report between "consultation and communication on the one hand and decision on the other." The paternalistic attitude reflected in this distinction is insulting and repugnant to graduate students.

As graduate students we fail to see the much vaunted distinction between students and academic staff. We do not see that the acquisition of a PhD in April automatically guarantees the attainment of the "special skills, knowledge, and experience" that seem so necessary for sitting on decision-making bodies in September. Neither do we concede that members of faculty have a greater interest in the workings of the university than we have. The question of conflict of interests is a general problem of General Faculties Council, not one that is specific to students. This problem is inevitable whatever mode of government is in force. Graduate students have made useful contributions in the past, and there is no reason to doubt that we shall continue to do so in the future.

The majority report explained how the allocation of representatives to General Faculties Council was made, one of the basic principles being that no one constituent group should be able to carry a measure without substantial support. The minority report blurs this principle completely and attempts to convey the impression of complete parity. The bogey of student take-over is illogically interjected. We are aware of the fact that fear of eventual domination exists in the minds of the author of the minority report, the administration in regards to the faculty and students, the students in regards to the faculty and administration, and the faculty in regards to the students and the administration. We do want domination to occur. We want a situation in which there are sufficient voices and votes to carry measures that are in keeping with our aspirations.

Finally, the question has been raised whether students were representative of student opinion; the question, when applied to faculty members is equally valid. In our opinion students' representatives should reflect student judgement and concern, not student 'opinion.'

We fully concur with the suggestions of the dissenting report about improving student-faculty relationships, and we urge that these suggestions be implemented. We believe that these should proceed concurrently with increased representation on General Faculties Council and its committees, but we do not accept the former as a substitute for the latter. We agree that even with increased representation on the Council, "it will be necessary to develop supplementary arrangements, formal and informal," for obtaining a wider spectrum of student views.

We have attempted to show that as graduate students we consider it our right to be represented on decision-making bodies. We do not feel that the onus of justifying change is on us, for we do not see that there is anything to justify. The Graduate Students' Association therefore endorses the majority report's recognition that increased representation on General Faculties Council is a right of students. The dissenting report concedes "the many imperfections of members of the academic staff in judgement and sensitivity in forming policy." It is because of these "imperfections" and this "insensitivity" that we want a voice in the policies that are formed, for we are quite convinced that if we do not make our views known in a manner that will be effective, we will continue to be the "toad under the university harrow." While we have as much faith in the University faculty as can be expected in the circumstances, we are not so sure that in the event of a clash of interest our views will carry the weight they deserve.

TRAFFIC DISRUPTION

Construction is expected to commence in February on Arts 2, phases I and II, in the vicinity of Saskatchewan Drive and 112 Street, and Mechanical Engineering, directly west of Assiniboia Hall, one block east of 116 Street. Traffic in these areas is therefore likely to be restricted.

BOOKS

A History of Russian Psychology: 1700-1970 by JOHN MCLEISH, Professor of Educational Psychology, will be published in England later this year by Methuen & Co. It will be the first history of the subject in any language, including Russian.

D. H. Ness

GENERAL MANAGER APPOINTED

D. H. NESS, Personnel Officer at The University of Alberta, has been appointed General Manager of the Students' Union. His appointment follows the resignation of W. EWASCHUK, and will be effective February 1, 1971. Mr. Ness, a graduate of this University, has been with the Personnel office since 1967.

COUNCIL ON STUDENT AFFAIRS

The following Minutes were prepared for FOLIO by A. A. RYAN, Provost, and Chairman of the Council.

At its meeting on January 19, the Council on Student Affairs made the following major decisions:

(1) Implementation of an amendment to the Students' Union Constitution (Article II, section 1(e)) allowing all members of the executive of Students' Council to register in only one course but still be full members of the Union, should be deferred until decisions have been reached about changes in student representation on General Faculties Council and in Students' Council organization, at which time the proposal should again be advanced.

(2) Another constitutional change, to allow Students' Council, "at its discretion, to provide funds to any organization, student or otherwise," should not be accepted until the Union's Disciplinary, Interpretation, and Enforcement Board considers its intent and financial implications. It was noted that the funds in question were collected by the Board of Governors which itself has no such powers of distribution of University funds. It was also suggested that the student body at large should be made aware of the proposal.

(3) A special committee to study changing stress factors within the University community should be established by General Faculties Council.

Reports were also tabled on the activities of the Canadian University Service Overseas (CUSO) and the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA), in both of which this campus leads all other Canadian universities.

The Council on Student Affairs includes representatives of the student body, academic staff, and administration, and has jurisdiction over all non-disciplinary aspects of student activities.

PEOPLE

■ The Secretary of State for External Affairs has said that his department will sponsor the research paper by J. WEIJER, Professor of Genetics, to be given at the International Atomic Energy Symposium on the Use of Radiation and Radioisotopes for Genetic Improvement of Industrial Micro-organisms, which will be held in Vienna from March 29 to April 2. Dr. Weijer has also been invited to present his research movie at the first International Mycological Congress, at the University of Exeter, in September.

■ SALEEM QURESHI, Associate Professor of Political Science, read a paper at the 28th International Congress of Orientalists, held January 6 to 12 in Canberra, Australia. He had earlier spent five weeks in Pakistan collecting material on the first free elections to be held on the basis of universal adult franchise in that country, which has the third largest electorate in the world. In the course of his researches, he interviewed a large number of party leaders in both East and West Pakistan.

■ PETER LINDSAY, Associate Professor of Physical Education and Chairman of the History Committee of the Canadian Association for Health, Physical Education, and Recreation; and GERRY GLASSFORD, Associate Professor of Physical Education, were invited to present papers on historical research in physical education at the annual meeting of the American National College Physical Education Association in Portland, Oregon in December.

■ V. GOURISHANKAR, Professor of Electrical Engineering, attended the fourth International Conference on System Sciences in Honolulu, Hawaii, accompanied by L. E. PEPPARD, graduate student, and AHMED SALAMA, former graduate student. They presented two papers.

EVENING COURSES

Applications are being accepted for two evening courses in business offered by the Department of Extension. "Office Management and Control," will begin on February 1, with J. MORRILL, Personnel Manager of R. Angus Limited, as instructor. It will present a review of the fundamental principles and practices applied in the supervision of office functions and personnel. Classes will be held for 10 Mondays, 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., and the fee is $65. "Legal Problems in Retail Sales and Financing," will be taught by D. A. STEWARD of Brownlee, Fryett and Company, and starts on February 2. This course will deal with legal difficulties which arise from sale contracts and financing arrangements in the wholesale and retail fields. It will run for 10 Tuesdays, and the fee is $65.

Registrations are also now being accepted for a ten-week course on "The Physiography of Alberta," for which the instructor will be L. A. BAYROCK of the Research Council of Alberta. The formation of the Rocky Mountains, Foothills, and the Plains will be discussed, with emphasis on the glacial history, illustrated by rock samples. A field trip is envisioned in the spring as a practical follow-up. The course will be held for 10 Wednesdays, 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., beginning February 17. The fee is $25. Additional information on all courses is available from the Department of Extension at 439-2021. Registrations are being accepted at Corbett Hall, 82 Avenue and 112 Street.

DOG OBEDIENCE CLASSES

Area 15 Community League is sponsoring the classes which are being held each Tuesday evening at 7:30 p.m. in the Chicago Vocational School, 12520 - 102 Avenue. All kinds of dogs are welcome, and owners are urged to have their pets trained in basic obedience. Further information may be obtained from MRS. TAYLOR, 434-2689.
